^a Btu is a unit of energy measurement.

^b The prices for heating oil and LP are the charge prices.

^c This price of natural gas is the variable price only. This is the cost per million Btu of gas delivered and varies directly with the number of Btu used. For example, if the variable costs is $10 per million Btu and 10 million Btu are used the total variable cost is $100, but if twice as many Btu are used, 20 million Btu, the cost doubles to $200.

^dThere is also a monthly fixed price which varies by utility and currently varies between $5.00 and $9.50 depending on the natural gas utility. This fixed price is unchanged whether 1, 10, 20 or 100 million Btu are used.

In the above example, if the variable cost is $10 per million Btu and the fixed cost is $5.00 a month, the total bill the customer would pay is $105 and the cost shown in this column is $$105/10$ million Btu or $10.50 per million Btu.

If 20 million Btu were used, the total customer bill would be $205 and the price shown in this column would be $$205/20$ million Btu= 10.25 per million Btu.

^eIncludes both the variable and fixed costs (see footnote d for a discussion of fixed and variable costs). The Division of Energy collects the prices through a telephone survey of heating oil & propane dealers and natural gas utilities.
